

Education

The Education section in a resume is where we highlight our academic background and qualifications. It provides employers with insight into our formal education, which can be crucial for certain roles or industries.

Importance of Education section

The level education is an important factor being considered by our recruiter while having decision making process. It provides concrete evidence of our academic qualifications, showcasing that we have obtained the necessary knowledge and skills for the position.

If we have mentioned College in our resume, it also plays an important role because many companies follows a convention of hiring the a lot of people from the same college.

Right Structure for resume's education section

1. Reverse chronological order :

- While listing our academic experience we should use reverse chronological order, which means display our recent completed education at the top then go below with the flow.
- It will make sure that the recruiter is updated with our latest academic achievements.

2. Educational institutions :

- University, college or institution from where we have earned our degree is very important, if we have institution of really good name then consider highlighting it as well.

3. Location and Date :

- Include our city, state and country in which your institution is situated in our resume.
- Include the completion date or expected completion date of our academic course.
- Specifying the expected graduation date offers valuable information about our availability and including our city state helps out our potential recruiter in case relocation is a consideration for the position.

4. Grade Point Average :

- It is not necessary to include your GPA in resume, but in case you have exceptionally well CGPA according to your college, then do add your CGPA as it creates good first impression.

Make our Education section standout

- Do not include our school information, despite you can add any relevant training or certifications that we have had completed.
- Tailor our education section in our resume according to the job we are applying for.
- Highlight the education that aligns with the job application.
